East West To Feature State's Top Schoolboy Talent

Enough talent to set the head of any college basketball coach swimming will be on hand here, Thursday night, for the 9th Annual East-West high school basketball game. Tip-off time is 8 p.m. at Memorial Gymnasium. Tickets will be sold at the door. Proceeds from the game will be used to support the summer recreation programs of the Hazard Little and Babe Ruth leagues.

For two local hoop stars, Don Smith and Bobby Baker, both of Hazard High School, it will be their last home appearance and fitting climax an illustrious career under Coach Goebel Ritter.

Smith and Baker, sparkplugs in Hazard march to last year's State tourney, will probably draw starting assignments for Coach John Bill Trivette, East tutor. Two other familiar names hereabouts who'll be on beck and call for Trivette are Jim Calhoun, Carr Creek, and James Moore, Hindman. Moore and Smith are Courier-Journal All-Stars.

The West squad, coached by Letcher Norton, Clark County, will feature a line-up built around Louisville's Eddie Schnurr, the 6-foot, 175 scoring sensation from St. Xavier.

An all-around athlete, Schnurr was selected to the Louisville Courier Journal All-State squad, named to the All-State Tournament Team, and just last week walked off with top honors in the State high school golf tourney at Paintsville.

Schnurr will be exhibiting his talents around for Norte Dame next year.

Another All-Stater will be Coach Norton's own Paul Smith, a name all too familiar to Hazard hoop fans. It was Smith, who dampened the spirits of the Bulldogs when Clark County tripped the Rittermen on a road trip this past season.

Until tomorrow night when the two teams square off in the first of their best-of-three series with an engagement at Paintsville, it's anybody's guess as to which is the strongest.

The West probably held an edge until Louisville Central's great Chuck Williams begged off. Williams 6-4, was shadowed in height by only Mike Surface, of Shively Butler, Surface is 6-5.

Returning here for another appearance on the local floor will be Bobby Newsome, of Lexington Lafayette, a boy rated by many as one of the outstanding schoolboy aces to perform here the past season. Newsome was high point man for the Generals of Coach Ralph Carlisle in a losing cause against Hazard.

The East will have a one inch height advantage over the West. The East squad averages 6-1 with Smith at 6-4 as the tallest man.

In 1689, a Frenchman, Robert Cavalier de La Salle, passed down the Ohio River all the way to the falls, now the site of Louisville.

Stuart Robinson Lays Plans

Long range plans that may determine the future of the Stuart Robinson-Highland School at Blackey were presented to the school alumni Saturday night at an alumni banquet.

The Rev. E. G. Howard, pastor of Graham Memorial Presbyterian Church at Whitesburg, told the group of projects now in the planning stage that may re-establish the Blackey school as an independent institution. The school's facilities are now being used by Letcher County.

A board of trustees is being organized to direct the school, according to Rev. Howard. Under their direction, he said, the school will be independent of both the county and the Presbyterian Church, U.S. That church has controlled the school since it was founded in 1914.

The present administrators, guided by school superintendent Harold Wright, are engaged in fund raising projects, the alumni were told. Rev. Howard said he and the Rev. W. L. Cooper, Whitesburg, past superintendent of the school, have made several trips to visit Presbyterian churches throughout the South, appealing for financial aid.

The school dormitories will be closed next year for remodeling. By 1968, Mr. Wright said, they hope to install a swimming pool, bridge paths and perhaps a lake nearby. At least 100 students will be accommodated then.

Wilson To Lead Program At Camp Nathanael

The Rev. Franklin Peoples of Hazard and surrounding counties will welcome the announcement that T. W. Wilson is soon to visit us. Many people are inquiring as to the exact date of his coming, for they say, "We want to hear him again." The above date is the time and the place is Camp Nathanael.

The Annual Conference scheduled each summer the week preceding July 4 at Camp Nathanael is proving a source of spiritual life and rich blessing to many. It is becoming a must on the calendar of many Christian people.

Camp Nathanael facilities are constantly being improved so that we are able to house not only individuals but also family groups. It is an ideal spot located five miles east of Dwarf on Route 80. At "Camp Nathanael" sign follow the gravel road for two minutes and you will arrive on the campus. If you desire to come and stay over, please send in your reservation.

Speakers for this year are exceptionally good. Dr. R. Arthur Mathews, a missionary for 15 years in China with the China Inland Mission, was the last under that organization to leave China when the communists took over. His will be a story you will want to hear. Dr. Mathews will speak each morning at 9 a.m. Dr.

Ralph H. Stoll has pastored the Calvary Baptist Church of Altoona, Pennsylvania for twenty years. He is much in demand at Bible conferences throughout this and other countries. Dr. Stoll will speak each morning at the 10:15 Bible Hour and alternate with T. W. for the afternoon services.

Yes, he is the same man. T. W. Wilson, remembered as our evangelist for the cooperative campaign in the Memorial Gym, will be our evening preacher. If the church at Camp Nathanael does not hold the people, amplifiers in the basement and on top of the church will carry his message to people inside and outside as well.

Why not plan now to attend this conference? Children must be accompanied by their parents. They will profit by attending the children's conference which is prepared especially just for them. The swimming pool will be open to conferees at stated times each day. No charge is made but an opportunity is given at each service for people to share in the expenses of the conference.

Here is your invitation and opportunity to see and hear T. W. Wilson and these other fine preachers. The date is June 30-July 5; the place is Camp Nathanael. Conference opens Monday evening with supper at 5:15.

General Telephone Seeking Hike In Cost Of Service

General Telephone Company of Kentucky announced today that it has filed an application with the Public Service Commission of Kentucky for permission to reprice the Company's service to its subscribers.

The request is for an increase of $1,853,000, of which some $994,000 would go for payment of Federal and State income taxes, leaving the Company approximately $859,000 in increased earnings.

General Telephone serves Hazard and Perry County. General Telephone operates 47 exchanges in Kentucky, in 30 counties and serves 330 communities.

Since January 1, 1953, the effective date of the last general increase granted the Company, it has increased from 59,405 to past five years has averaged 112,568 the number of telephones in service. Nearly $22 million has been invested in additional telephone plant during that period, so that as of April 30, 1958, it has invested in Kentucky nearly $32 million.

Since January 1, 1953, General has increased the number of its employees by 57.5%, while total payroll costs have increased 106%.

Service demands throughout the State are such that General expects to spend more than $15 million in plant expansion during 1958 and 1959.

Investment per telephone was $247 in 1952, and the cost of adding a telephone during the

The overall goal of the FHA is to help individuals improve personal, family and community living now and in the future.

Kentucky has the distinction of being the first state to be chartered as an FHA state association. The state association was chartered in 1945 shortly after FHA was founded in Chicago on June 11, 1945.

There are now 264 FHA chapters in high schools, across the state with 14,660 members.

Woman Killed In Accident At Whitesburg

A Whitesburg woman was killed Saturday afternoon when a car driven by Hollie Craft, of Crown, Ky., struck her on U.S. 119 approximately one mile north of Whitesburg.

The victim, Mrs. Cindy Caudill, 49, died at the Whitesburg Miners Memorial Hospital at 6:20 p.m., Saturday, four hours after the accident.

After running into Mrs. Caudill, Craft's car turned over and slid over 300 feet down the road, according to State Police.

Craft was charged by Troopers Roy Hall and Otis Anderson with drunken driving and driving on the wrong side of the road. A spokesman for State Police said today he will probably also be charged with manslaughter.

State Police said here today that Craft was driving at a high rate of speed when he lost control of the car and ran down Mrs. Caudill on the shoulder. The car turned over when he veered back into the road.

PUBLIC SAFETY FORM 2307

State To Issue Driver Licenses From Frankfort

Under a new system of issuing driver's licenses beginning June 15, the State hopes to reduce traffic accidents and deaths.

During June 15-July 31, drivers with last-name initials of "A" through "K" are required to renew their two-year licenses. Under the new system, adopted by the 1958 Legislature, a driver's eligibility to operate a motor vehicle is certified by the Department of Public Safety before it issues him a permanent license.

The old system does not provide an infallible check of eligibility. Licenses are issued by circuit clerks upon satisfactory completion of driver's tests or presentation of old licenses and the $2 fee. Duplicates may be obtained from the clerks if old licenses are lost.

Here's the new procedure of central issuance, according to Safety Commissioner Don Sturgill:

The driver applies to the circuit clerk for a license or renewal and receives a 90-day permit. The application, filled out and signed by the driver, is sent to the department's Division of Operator Responsibility at Frankfort and is photographed. The original copy is filed at Frankfort. A portion of the photographed copy is mailed to the applicant's home address. This is his driver's license.

This process will enable the State to consult its "hot file" of persons whose licenses have been taken away and to refuse re-issuance of licenses to them. Licensing now will fit in with the State's point system, under which licenses are suspended or revoked upon accumulation of points given for violations, Sturgill says. He adds that the ability to deny motorists with a history of traffic violations legal permission to drive will increase highway safety materially.

To prevent counterfeiting, the license will be photographed on a special paper and a different code number assigned to each driver.

The application on file at Frankfort and the photographed license carried by the individual will be up-to-date records on each driver. False applications will bring penalties. For instance, if a suspended driver applies falsely for a license, the suspension period will be doubled. The correct name and address of each driver will be on file at Frankfort and also on his license, since he can receive a license only through the mail.

Distribution Of Trees Increases

The 13,700,000 young trees distributed by the Kentucky Division of Forestry during the spring of 1958 planted nearly 15,000 acres of land, according to J. P. Rhody, assistant director.

This was an increase of four million trees over 1957. Most of these pine and hardwood seedlings were raised in the forestry division's nurseries at Kentucky Dam Village and Pennyville State Forest. Rhody said the 1958 goal is 25 million trees.

Kentucky has more than one million acres of idle, worn out or eroded land which can grow timber if planted to trees. Some of this land will qualify for Soil Bank and Agricultural Conservation Program payments when reforested.

Information on tree planting and payments may be obtained from your local state forester or the Division of Forestry in Frankfort.

Allen's Pitching Gives Beavers 7-3 Victory; Yanks Tops Tribe, 19-18

Benny Fitzpatrick
The second round of action in the Little League provided plenty of excitement and action as the Braves defeated the Dodgers, 7-3 and the Yankees edged by the Indians 19-18.

In the Braves-Dodger game, stout pitching by Charles Allen gave the Braves their 7-3 win. The Dodgers picked up 3 quick runs in the first inning before being blanked the rest of the game. Dodger pitcher James Rose pitched a good game as he allowed but five hits but his teammates committed 8 errors behind him. The Braves were led by Jim Yancy with two hits while Rose and Muncy of the Dodgers also had 2 hits each.

The Hard - Hitting Yankees came to Collins Field with their hitting shoes on but apparently forgot their arms. The Indians were able to stay in the game only through the generosity of 4 Yank pitchers who allowed 19 base on balls. The Yankees gave Indian hurler William Cornett notice early that they were hitting as they roached him for a 5 run, 6 hit first inning. The Yanks pulled it out in the bottom of the sixth on 4 consecutive hits. The Indians were led at the plate by Phil Copeland and Doug Francis with 2 hits each. ### Every Foot of Space Used Here

There's not a foot of space in this miracle modern design that is not utilized to best advantage to give you the most home for your money.

The handsome exterior offers low cost distinction with its nearly flat roof and sweeping honest lines. As to the interior, it's hard to believe that so many of the most desired features can be planned into a one-story design, but see for yourself that not a luxury idea is left out.

Wide, bright window areas are featured in every room with a picture view window for the living room. A floor-to-ceiling fieldstone wall, enclosing fireplace and woodbox, further distinguishes the living area.

Although opposite the entranceway, the dining area is effectively screened by a china cupboard.

Separated from the living-dining area only by a snack bar, the homemaker remains active in family conversations, even though carrying out her meal preparation chores. Louver folding doors permit privacy in the area, however, when desired.

The kitchen—a masterpiece of efficiency—has its own entrance from the backyard. The terrace with doors leading to both study and kitchen doubles as a summertime outdoor dining room and adds a note of graciousness to suburban living.

The bedrooms and multi-purpose room are positioned in a wing of their own. At the back is the master bedroom with two generous sized closets and corner windows for superior ventilation.

In the bath, there is a good deep linen closet to supplement the main closet in the hallway. An alternate basement plan is available.

If your family believes a house was meant to be lived in, this is a sure bet.

This plan conforms to general F.H.A. VA and Building Code requirements. The plan contains 981 sq. ft., 9,316 cu. ft. without basement and 10,770 cu. ft. with a basement. Your builder or material supplier can give you the average cost per square or cubic foot in your area.

Ambassador In Dungarees To Work Here During Summer Months

(Ed.'s Note: The following article is reprinted from Parson's Magazine, June, 1955 issue. This summer, the "Ambassadors in Dungarees" will be here in Perry County, and will have major roles in the City's new recreation program. The article is presented here to background their work here in Perry County.)

Under a blazing August sun, fifteen vacationing college students—eight young women and seven young men—were excavating for the foundations of a rural health center when a contractor happened by and stopped to watch. All fifteen were singing merrily. It was a song, a song, but that didn't slow down the rhythm of their labors or their singing. "I couldn't get my men to work that hard for love or money," the contractor remarked to one of the shovelers. "Mister, we wouldn't work this hard, either, for money," the girl replied, mopping her brow and dipping a drink from the water bucket.

These young people were laboring for love—and paying $135 apiece, plus travel costs, for the privilege. They were volunteer participants in one of the summer work camps which help underprivileged communities undertake projects of local importance, and provide youthful work campers with opportunities for service and fellowship.

One work camp helped a Swiss village dig out from under an avalanche which had overwhelmed it. Several have helped to repair the destruction wrought by earthquakes. A Quaker work camp made up of high school youngsters from all over the United States spent two successive summers helping rebuild the village of Brownfield, Maine, after it was almost completely destroyed by a forest fire.

One mother whose daughter worked at the Brownfield camp received a postcard saying only, "It's terrific." Curious to learn just what was so terrific, this mother drove up to Brownfield. All along the road entering town she could see the effects of the fire—hillsides reduced to blackened stumps, families camping in improvised tar-paper shacks until their houses could be rebuilt, raw prefabricated dwellings rising from the ruins. In Brownfield itself she found a spirit she had never felt before.

These high school youngsters, singing as they worked, had already completed a town hall, given it two coats of paint outside and decorated the interior walls with colorful murals. The exterior of the firehouse was nearing completion. Equally impressive were the odd jobs the campers were undertaking—planting trees along Brownfield's main street, regarding the topsoil around the church, helping farmers with their haying, even baby-sitting. One group was sorting and cataloging the 5,000 books donated to restock the library.

The visiting mother returned home next day with a deep sense of how much a work camp could mean, both to campers and to those for whom and with whom they worked.

The first volunteer work camp was launched immediately after World War I, when a Swiss named Pierre Ceresole decided it was high time for young Germans and young Frenchmen to stop hating each other. His antidote for hatred was to invite small groups from both countries to work shoulder to shoulder near Verdun, France, repairing some of the physical and spiritual havoc war had wrought. The plan worked.

In 1934, Quakers brought the work camp seed to the United States, where it took root and sprouted. By last summer, more than twenty American religious denominations and non-sectarian groups were sponsoring week-end, summer or year 'round work camps for both high school and college students, and young Americans were also participating in many overseas work camps sponsored by the World Council of Churches and by 33 other international organizations. You could find work campers—ambassadors in dungarees—in almost every state in the union and on six continents, digging wells and drainage ditches, erecting churches, nursery schools and community centers, establishing bonds of friendship with displaced persons, racial minorities, victims of war and disaster.

Each work camp arises out of a specific local problem. Typical was last summer's camp near Lakewood, N. J., where 16 high school students helped a community of Kalmuks build a Buddhist temple. The Kalmuks are the surviving remnants of the Golden Horde of Genghis Khan, which during the 13th century ruled Eurasia from China all the way to Poland. Some of them settled down in southwestern Russia. During the later months of World War II, retreating German armies carried them off as slave laborers and they ended up in postwar refugee camps. Two years ago 560 Kalmuk men, women and children were admitted to the United States. The following winter a group of Kalmuk families bought a 30-acre farm in New Jersey, where they hope to establish a modest cultural center.

Industrious and skilled in all kinds of animal husbandry, the Kalmuks will no doubt prosper in the United States. But to get started they needed help. There were houses to erect, language barriers to be surmounted, children to be introduced to American customs and readied for public school. Above all, the Kalmuks needed to be assured that they were welcome in the land they had reached after almost Biblical wanderings.

To meet their need the American Friends Service Committee assembled high school juniors and seniors from Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina, Ohio and the District of Columbia. One camper came from Germany and one from France. The co-directors of the camp were usually the case, Dr. Fulton, a graduate of the Yale Divinity School and Union Theological Seminary, is a Presbyterian Minister and professor at Lake Forest College in Illinois. Assisting him and his wife were a Quaker deaconess from Hungary and an Ohio schoolteacher who served as Girl's counselor. Like the work campers, the four staff members were volunteers. They and the campers lived all summer in tents.

Elsewhere last summer a Congregational work camp was helping Indians on the Fort Berthold Reservation in North Dakota build a parsonage and church to replace one flooded out by a new power dam. A Church of the Brethren work camp helped repair and redecorate a Negro settlement house in Kansas City. A Disciples of Christ camp on the island of Jamaica helped rebuild churches destroyed by the 1951 hurricane. A work camp sponsored by the American Jewish Society for Service built a non-sectarian day camp for the children of a West Virginia mining town. An Episcopal work camp ran an occupational therapy program for crippled children in Puerto Rico. A Methodist work camp undertook various medical and educational projects in Cuba. A Baptist work camp helped build a children's camp in Connecticut. United Presbyterian camps renovated churches in Stafford, Kansas; Swanwick, Illinois; and Telluride, Colorado. A Universalist work camp operated a day camp for 1800 children of varied racial and national origins in Chicago. Scores of other communities, faced with problems too big to be tackled alone, sought help from the organizations which sponsor work camps. If the need was sufficiently great, if there were opportunities for spiritual as well as material contributions, and if local cooperation was available, the help was almost always forthcoming—a point to remember if your community needs assistance next summer.

Because they are little known and seldom publicized, work camps are occasionally misunderstood and even opposed by groups in the communities to which they come. Work camp sites are often selected because they are close to areas of national, racial, religious or economic tensions. To the settled citizens of a rural county, a work camp helping non-white migrant farm laborers may seem strange at first. But the sight of fifteen or twenty young people perspiring mightily on a project of obvious social importance is almost always enough to arouse first curiosity, then respect and finally participation.

Sometimes it works the other way. A boy from one work camp at a site selected in part because of Protestant-Catholic tensions was strolling through town one day when he came upon a nun in long robes cutting the lawn in front of the parochial school.

"Let me do that, Sister," he said. In the friendly chat which followed, the nun learned he was Catholic.

"And what would you be doing in a Protestant work camp?" she asked.

The camper's spirited interpretation of just what the work camp sought to accomplish spread like wildfire through the Catholic half of the community and suspicions previously aroused were dissipated.

All who really discover what work camps can do are won over by the sincerity of their purpose as well as what they mean in the lives of young people. A well-to-do business executive we know says, "I was frankly worried about my daughter. When she suddenly announced that she wanted to go to a work camp in Mexico, her mother and I doubted that she was mature enough. But we let her go—and we've never regretted it."

"I don't know what those work campers accomplished for the Mexican village to which they went. But I know what they did for our daughter. We sent down a teen-aged, bobby-soxed little flibbertigibbet, and we got back a sensitive, thoughtful, socially mature young woman."

Attending an overseas work camp might be thought to be more glamorous than digging a well in Arkansas or painting a church in Texas. But applicants for overseas camps who seek glamour are warned to stay away. "This is not a Cook's tour, with uniformed attendants and hot showers each evening," they are told by Rev. Joseph Howell, a member of the committee which arranges American participation in the World Council of Churches' Ecumenical Work Camps held each summer in 21 countries. "You must be ready for anything—for disappointment, frustrations, miscalculations; for cold nights, cold rain, cold starry food; no milk, no eggs, no meat, no mail from home. Be ready for missing trains and for standing up all night when you catch one. Be ready for fellow campers who are too young, too old, too inefficient, too orthodox or too unorthodox."

Then he adds, "Those who tour Europe under other auspices may see more, hit more high spots and more night spots, collect more souvenirs, spend more money, and talk louder when they return. But those who join work camps are rewarded with special insights and friendships."

There are numerous examples of such hard-earned rewards. One came to a group of campers on a Caribbean island, whose assigned task was to clear a playground and run a Bible school in an isolated valley, and to teach reading to the valley's illiterates. The campers quickly noted, however, another urgent need—to repair the washed-out road which had once linked the valley with the outside world. Alas, the valley was torn by dissensions. No man would work on the road lest his enemies benefit.

Shortly after their arrival, these ambassadors in dungarees set out with their shovels to fill the gaping chasms in the road. Soon a brace of valley boys ambled up.

"Who's paying you?" they asked.

"Nobody," the campers replied, and explained why they were investing their summer vacation in work camp service to others. The village boys strolled off again, and the campers resumed their shoveling.

Before long, the boys were back with shovels of their own—and behind them strode a landlord who angrily asked the same question.

Again the campers explained. "I'll send my truck to haul gravel," the landlord volunteered when his astonishment had subsided. Other villages and landlords joined in, and by the end of the week the scores of young people laboring on the road were being assisted by a road-scraper, three bulldozers and half a dozen trucks. Before they left the island, the campers had their reward. They were able to stand on the hill from which the gravel had been quarried and see the road, now reopened to traffic, winding on down to the beautiful circus groves and sugar cane fields spread out in the valley.

The buildings which work campers erect are mostly modest structures. But where the need is great the accomplishment can match it—as a young Waldensian pastor named Tullio Vinay demonstrated in northern Italy. The Waldensians consider themselves the world's oldest Protestant sect. They arose in France nearly 800 years ago and later migrated high into the Italian Alps.

The architect examined Pastor Vinay's site, near the mile-high village of Prali, in the shadow of snow-clad mountains rising a mile higher still—and he fell in love with it. As he tramped through the valley, he envisioned a great hall of native stone rising proudly from the mountain slope, roomy enough to seat hundreds. At one end a thirty-foot-high wall of glass would look out on God's handiwork; two enormous fireplaces flanking it would send forth their flames of welcome to those returning after sundown. Then there must be dormitories—three of them, sleeping 150 or more; a long, low-roofed but openwalled chapel; a bell tower commanding the entire valley; a kitchen, and other outbuildings—in short, an entire village built of native stone and hand-hewn timbers. This village would be a monument to agape, the Greek word for love of your fellow man. Some half a million hours of labor would be needed to complete it.

In July, 1947, with less than two hundred dollars to spend on the monumental project, Pastor Vinay and seven young Waldensians climbed into the mountains to start work. Conditions were primitive. The campers slept on gunnysacks filled with straw; they washed in icy water; they worked long hours. Yet campers who came for a week stayed month after month—and many came back the following summer.

That first summer the campers quarried 50 tons of limestone from the mountainside and hauled it to an abandoned lime kiln which they had reconstructed. They felled 50 tons of firewood and hauled it, too, up to the kiln. Then day and night for ten days they stoked the kiln fires under the limestone.

"At the end of the summer, weary and with their clothes in tatters," Pastor Vinay recalls, "those young campers were able to bring to the site 25 tons of the finest quicklime for our mortar—the first sign of the mortar of love which was to bind together the stones of Agape."

The following summer, and every summer since, Pastor Vinay's young Waldensians have been joined by other Italians, Protestants and Catholics, and by work campers from the United States and 30 other countries, recruited by the World Council of Churches. More than a thousand volunteers have given their labor.

Campers came from Ceylon and Ethiopia, from Finland, Canada and Jamaica, from Greece, New Zealand and the Cameroons. Rich and poor labored together. No one was surprised to see Bishop Stephen Neill of the Church of England wielding a shovel or Dr. W. A. Visser 't Hooft, secretary-general of the World Council of Churches, swinging a pick.

Little by little the buildings themselves rose serenely from the ground. By 1952, Agape was ready to house its first conference.

A broad or at home, work camps are singing camps. The boys and girls sing at work and at play, and they use songs to break the ice in making new friends everywhere.

Only once has singing failed to bridge the gap between campers and neighbors—and then the failure was only temporary.

It was in the Arab village of Kabile, Algeria. Campers from the United States and half a dozen other countries had invited

Arab youngsters to join them in an after-work-hours singathon at which each national group in turn rendered its favorite tunes. The evening looked like a dismal flop. Arab music and Western music were so different that neither could get the hang of the other's melodies. Then, just before the party broke up, the Americans burst forth with "Old MacDonald Had a Farm."

The response was immediate. The young Arabs laughed and cheered and pounded the floor in time with the singing. Throughout the summer, campers were cheered to hear young Arabs humming to themselves or singing in harmony together—"And on that farm there were some ducks, eee eye eee eye oh!" Perhaps the boys of Kabile are singing it still, keeping alive the sense of brotherhood which a work camp radiates.

Work campers have a saying which sums up their goals: "It is good to help others. It is better to help others to help themselves. But it is best of all to help others help others."

Many of you have stated that you have been missing my column in the paper. No, folks, I haven't quit writing the column. I will tell you why. I have been house cleaning, gardening, working with flowers. You see, my wife has been gone almost two months. I have been trying to get everything in ship shape when she gets home. This I have never had to do before. Boys, I sure hope that you never have to go through it. This is the season of the year when our good women look forward to all this fixing up. This has been the first spring that I have not had one along to tell me just what to do. Sometimes I wonder about other countries that allows a man to have as many wives as he thinks he will need. I sure could have used many on the job that I have been on, provided they could have offered the advice in regard to what should be done, that is the only one that I have. I am looking for her back most any day, so you can look for the column regular. Sure glad to hear that so many of you have missed it. Boys what would you do if you had a dozen or so? I am afraid I would be looking for a hole in the ground to crawl into.

GARDENING PLUS FISHING

I have talked with many of you, it seems that you are torn apart from your past times. I would say that you are between a rock and a hard place, you want to go fishing, still you want to get that garden laid by. Old man weather has kept you from doing much of either. I know this has been a late season for many of you. Folks, we just have to accept what the Good Man Above sends to us, and then make the best of what we get. I know it is hard, I know of no other source to turn to. "DO YOU?"

SICK AND AFFLICTED

Few days ago I had an old man to approach me in regard to his license, which he was entitled to, a lifetime free license. He was seeking one for his wife, who is only fifty-three. A free license can only be given to a person that has reached the age of Sixty-five Years of Age. He was almost blind, both on Welfare. He asked me if he couldn't get a license the same as he had for his wife. I tried to explain to him that according to law, that it couldn't be done. He replied I have no use for mine, I can't see how to get up and down the river banks. In detail he went into a long story, without his wife he could hardly do anything, she was his seeing eye. After some talk about it, he finally asked, would it be against the law for her to dig my worms? I assured him it wasn't. I would suggest that this be brought to the attention of our Representatives, Senators and other law-making bodies in regard to such people in this type distress. I will assure you that I will endeavor to do all that I can to help people of this type. It would be very easy to check with other state agencies such as the Welfare Dept. in regard to anyone asking for this type aid. I am confident that the Dept. of Fish and Wildlife Resources would be more than glad to go along with people in helping them in cases such as this. I am confident that it would take an act of the Legislature to pass on such amendment to the all ready laws that are recorded on the Statute Books. Something to think about boys, if you want to do something for your fellowman. You would have to go through it to really appreciate the meaning of it.

"OH" NO LADIES

I am sure that you didn't mean it, did you ever realize what would happen to a man trying to write something about what our women should wear, regardless if it was on a fishing trip, to a dance, or to church. As far as I am concerned the SACK DRESSES are for you that like them. We men have no choice in the matter. I judge that some of you can wear them, and maybe some of you can't. I would say your size and age would have a lot to do with it. Most of you that have asked me to express my opinion in regard to the Sacks as you call them, have been somewhat above the teenage group. I would say that naturally you could have been a little over-weight. No doubt one dress of this type maybe could not have been too fitting for you. Where it could have been for others. Far be it from me to enter into the style parade. I don't care if the women wear overalls, slacks or whatever name you want to call them. Regardless if it is SACKS, SLACKS, OVERALLS, COVERALLS or whatever it might be, I think you will find your men will agree with you to a certain point.

MEMORIAL DAY

I wonder how many of us really think of May 30th as the day it should be considered. You will notice many stores that will sell decorations for the graves of loved ones, yes beloved ones that have not been forgotten, for the ones that have been left behind. To all of you on this Memorial day I wish to share part of the burden that you are going through. Many of you have traveled many miles to pay your respects to your deceased. I am sure that you will head home to your present abode with a satisfied mind that you did all you could do. You people that have traveled so far are to be commended for thinking of this date, to come home to pay the tributes of flowers and etc. Yes, to the LOVED ONES that you had cherished so much. On your way home I would say use extreme care in driving, regardless of what distance you might have. Just remember your right-of-way of a yellow line doesn't always excuse you of a fatal accident. Drive with CARE.

SOME OF YOU

Are having some luck on your fishing trips, latest I have heard from, Jim Cole with a good catch near Beattyville on trout line. Denver Combs, Lake Cumberland, using surface baits; M. J. Dillard and wife over Norris way, Night fishing; M. J. says it was new to him but they caught all types of fish. Babe Noplis, Stanley O'Crosky, Russell Noplis did all right over at Norris. Fishing of all types are looking brighter, the elements have about got back to normal.

Beltline Concept Deserves Support of Community

Now being knocked around here and in Frankfort is the wonderful idea for a Beltline highway around Hazard on the Yards side of the North Fork.

The advantages of the idea are a hundred-fold—new residential property, new industrial sites, new business sites—in brief—new living pace, which we are sure everyone within this community realizes is drastically needed.

This highway is needed, and it is a credit to the City Zoning Commission and other city officials that the idea was incorporated in the city's zoning and subdivision regulations.

It does not require much vision to see such a beltline developing along lines familiar to the one that skirts the northern half of Lexington.

Our beltline passes through "relatively flat country", which is saying something herabouts. This land needs only to be opened up with a road to provide the people of Perry County with greater opportunities. Drive-in restaurants, theaters, possibly even shopping center, sites for small industry—if we allow our mind

Picard To Speak At Coal Meeting

WASHINGTON, May 19—Jean Picard, president of the Association Technique de l'Importation Charbonniere, Paris, France, will be one of the featured speakers at the National Coal Association convention in Chicago next month. It has been announced by Frank A. Burne, chairman of the Convention Committee. The French executive will address the Coal Exporters Association of the U. S. at a luncheon June 5.

With acceptance of the convention invitation by Mr. Picard, the NCA convention program is now complete, Mr. Burne said. He listed the following highlights scheduled for the general sessions:

On the morning of June 4, immediately after opening ceremonies and reports on Association activities, Senator Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky will speak on legislative problems of the coal industry.

The Association's annual membership luncheon, also scheduled for the first day, will be addressed by Dr. Robert E. Wilson, recently retired chairman of the board of Standard Oil Company (Ind.) and a member of the General Advisory Committee to the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission.

The afternoon session will feature a panel discussion to be moderated by Dexter M. Koezler, New York, vice president of McGraw-Hill Publishing Company. Participating in the symposium will be: C. F. Clausen, manager of the Manufacturing Process Department of Portland Cement Association; Gordon R. Corey, vice-president of Commonwealth Edison; B. J. Fletcher, vice president and general manager of engineering, Aluminum Company of America; and Charles R. Potter, supervisor, Raw Materials Division, Jones and Laughlin Steel Company.

On Thursday, June 5, except for the luncheon at which Mr. Picard will speak, sessions will be devoted to business meetings of NCA committees, Bituminous Coal Institute, and the annual business meeting of the Coal Exporters Association. The annual convention will come to a close with a reception and banquet Thursday night.

NCA members and guests also plan to visit the new Prudential Building power plant, whose coal-burning and coal-burning facilities are among the most modern combustion equipment in the world. One of the outstanding entertainment events for the Chicago visitors will be a performance of "My Fair Lady" on Wednesday night, June 4.

Kelly Family Building Patio At Home

Clara G. Kelly

You should see the "working" going on in Carl Kelly's yard. I think every boy in the community is having a hand in building the Kelly's patio. Of course, the big mixer of home made ice cream. Mrs. Kelly has promised them could have something to do with the good attendance.

John and Sue Stubblefield are visiting his son, John M. and family in Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Deaton and Darrell visited relatives in Breathitt County over the week end.

Mrs. Cass Collins entertained with a birthday party for her daughter, Linda, who was celebrating her eleventh birthday. Several guests were present and Linda received many beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Strunk, of Twila, visited with the Merdie Eversole family Monday. The Strunks are former residents of Combs.

Congratulations to Roberta and Virgil Smith of Hamilton, Ohio on the recent arrival of their baby, daughter, Deborah Lynn. Mrs. Smith is the former Roberta Crayson of Combs. This is their first child.

Nell Sizemore Noble, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sizemore this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Fields and family and Mr. and Mrs. George "Wash" Combs of Happy went fishing this weekend at London Dock.

Uncle John Wooton is back on the road to recovery. We hope he continues to improve.

The Shelby Strunks had as their guests over the weekend their son, Orlin and children of Ohio.

Marie and Cass Collins and Linda are visiting Marie's mother, Mrs. Mary Frisby, of Morgan County. They should get in a lot of fishing and here's hoping the fish are biting good.

Mrs. Allene Osborne and children, of Hamilton, Ohio, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Wooton.

Another new family who has moved into the "Frogtown" section of Combs, is John Engle. He has purchased one of the Ruck Wooton houses.

Mr. and Mrs. Finley Begley had the pleasure of having their foster son, Nicholas Rice, who is in the Army and Bobby Allen, of Krypton, who is in the Navy, visiting with them for two weeks. Nicholas is going to Germany and Bobby will be stationed on the east coast of the United States.

Joyce and Dan Hutchinson visited relatives in Indiana this past week.

Ray Lee Cunningham and family, of Cincinnati, Ohio, visited Mr. and Mrs. Corbett Hoskins and Mrs. Louise Cunningham and Betty Lou over the weekend.

Carolyn Sue Cunningham, 2½ year old daughter of Donnie and Stella King Cunningham, fractured her skull when she fell from a slide in an amusement park in Hamilton, Ohio. She was confined to a hospital there. Carolyn Sue is the granddaughter of Mrs. Louise Cunningham.

Don't forget the coming revival to be held at the Combs Baptist Church beginning June 1st. We're hoping to have good attendance. Don't let us down. Everyone is invited to attend.

We want to take this opportunity to thank the Hazard Fire Department for coming to our aid Wednesday. If it hadn't been for the efforts of the Fire Department and the people in the community who carried water and etc., a whole block of homes would have been destroyed. One family lost everything and one saved most all of their furniture. This should make us all realize that we certainly need to get behind the water project and get a water supply in our community for just such emergencies as this.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Logan and Glenna have returned to their home at Point Pleasant, W. Va., after a visit with their parents. Miss Elva Wray Combs accompanied them home for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Sturgill have moved to Leatherwood. We sure hated to see Jim and Louise and the boys move.

Earl Coda and Frazier McGhee, of Ohio, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Coda.
